

Lines and circles.

Draw a circle and a line inside the circle (Joining two points)

Draw another circle and join three points.

Investigate the relationship between the number of points on the circle and the number of lines required to join all the points to each other.

Can you find a general rule?

Record your ideas in an interesting way.

